
The Nordic-Arab research collaboration project, "New Avenues for Political Influence for Women in the Arab region", financed by the Swedish Research Council.
Project leader: Drude Dahlerup. Arab partner: Center for Arab Women for Training and Research, CAWTAR

Collected by Hedvig Stahre, master of political science.

Introduction

This mapping is made for the benefit of researchers abroad, who want to learn about Gender Studies in the Nordic countries, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden on the theme of women/gender in public life. Most of the research literature - especially from the first decades of Nordic Women’s Studies/Gender Studies - was published in the native languages, and is therefore not included here. But with the development of Gender Studies an increasing number of publications would appear in English. See also the essay by Drude Dahlerup on “The development of Women’s Studies/Gender Studies in the social sciences in the Scandinavian countries”, an overview over the main approaches in Nordic Women’s Studies/Gender Studies, based on all publications within this research field. Both documents are available at www.statsvet.su.se/wip

What is ‘public life’?

The differentiation between what is public and what is private life has been discussed in many different fora, and is a contested issue also in gender research. In the overview of publications about Women in Nordic Public Life we arrived at the decision to account for the main areas of society where women are present, and where their main purpose is professional, or political or voluntary participation. In this definition the emphasis is on women being active in some part of the society, where the majority of their contacts are with other people than family members. With this broad definition we capture the development of research on Women in Nordic Public Life in several fields:

1 The concept ‘Nordic’ is commonly used covering the five countries, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden, why ‘Scandinavia’ covers only three of these countries, Denmark, Norway and Sweden. However, the terms are used interchangeable here, since in many countries around the world ‘Scandinavia’ is the most well-known term.
Selected fields:
- Women/gender in the labour market
- Female leadership, both public and private
- Women in civil society, such as women’s associations and feminist movements
- Gender and politics, women as voters and representatives, including political parties
- Gender quotas.
- Public gender equality policies and institutions, incl. welfare state research
- Women/gender in corporative boards
- Women/gender in education
- Gendered citizenship, and
- Women in media
- Women and immigration
- Feminist theory of relevance for women in public life

Additional criteria:
Only publications by researchers at Nordic universities are included, incl. guest researchers. Furthermore, some publications are included that discuss Women in Nordic Public Life in comparison with other countries, and hence are not exclusively about Nordic women.

Some aspects of welfare states are not directly related to public life, but are part of the discussion about when the private becomes political. Some parts of the research on the Nordic welfare states are included, while others have been omitted to limit the size of this mapping, even if they undoubtedly are important for women’s position in the labour market, e.g. the large literature about different discourses concerning parental leave. However, only a few publications on this matter have been included in the overview. For more titles on this subject, see Borchorst; Freidenvall or Ellingsäter in this mapping.

Accessibility
The accessibility of the publications was also taken into account. Hence the majority of the publications presented in the list are published in peer-review journals (most of the newer ones accessible online), as chapters in books, or are entire books. Included are also some reports from the Nordic Council of Ministers, which are accessible online, as well as government supported reports available from the respective governments. The publications listed below primarily originate from these data bases on gender research. We are of course aware that all relevant contributions may not have been included, but we believe this mapping can serve as a relevant overview to people, who are not familiar with the Nordic languages.
The list is divided into ten-year periods from today and back to the 1970s. Within each block the publications are sorted alphabetically. We hope this mapping, together with Drude Dahlerup’s essay, will be helpful for readers, who want to get an overview over the development of Nordic research on women in public life since the 1970s.

The keywords and the titles make it easy to find publications of your specific interest. Just use the normal search function of your word, office etc.
